Dear Mr. Hoover:

I want to thank you for your courtesy in sending me a copy of the current issue of the FBI Law Enforcement Bulletin, which contains the article by Captain Dunn of the Idaho State Police on Idaho's experimental program involving use of aircraft to enforce highway laws.

This experiment merits praise, and I am pleased that my state is taking the lead in this field. I thought the article should be more widely distributed, and so I inserted it in the Congressional Record. I have enclosed a copy of the pertinent tear sheets for your information.

EXTENSIONS OF REMARKS

FRESH FISH FOR ALASKA

HON. NICK BEGICH

OF ALASKA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, September 21, 1971

Mr. BEGICH. Mr. Speaker, while the fishing industry is one of the most important segments of the Alaskan economy, many Alaskans find fresh fish products unavailable in their local markets. Most fish caught in Alaska and available for distribution in the State are first shipped to the "lower 48" for processing. Needless to say, this is an unnecessary expense to the Alaskan consumer and an unfair practice to those Alaskans who enjoy fresh fish.

Recently, John Wiese, writer for one of Alaska's most distinguished newspapers, the Anchorage Daily-News, wrote an interesting article regarding the problem of making fresh fish available to Alaskans. At this time, I would like to include into the RECORD the article Mr. Wiese wrote.

The article follows:

FRESH FISH FOR ALASKA

(By John Wiese)

A gripe that has persisted for fully half a century has been the unavailability of fish products for local retail distribution unless they had been first shipped to the lower 48 after being processed from stocks caught in Alaska waters.

A program instituted in Anchorage by the Whitney-Fidalgo people promises to substantially reduce some of the adverse effects of this situation.

In the past, with rare exception, items like canned salmon or crab meat or clams that grocers have stocked for urban Alaskan customers could not be obtained by the store keepers directly from plants where the products had been packed. This has been especially true with "name brands."

These items had to be ordered by the retailers through their established wholesale suppliers who shipped them north through Seattle. Obviously, convenience and cost suffered adversely.

Several reasons were always offered for this practice.

Processing plants in Alaska were not adequately equipped to make the relatively small sales represented in local consumption requirements.

Products are required to go through quality-control inspection procedures and these are arranged only in Seattle or Astoria or San Francisco or Bellingham. Changing this would cause undue costs.

Labeling or repackaging or otherwise finalizing the fish products was almost never done at the Alaskan plants so the trip Outside is mandatory before they can be available for retail sales.

Whitney-Fidalgo has started an Alaska distribution facility in Anchorage that changes things. They are even warehousing a total of 3,000 cases of various types of canned salmon in Anchorage to be distributed to retailers and institutions in the state, according to Tom Doyle, superintendent of the firm's freezer and cold storage plant here.

The plan calls for a year-'round operation from this plant which is located near Anchorage International Airport.

In addition to the canned products, fresh and frozen fish products are also to be stocked. Some items are to be especially processed here for intrastate trade.

An instance of this is king and Dungeness crab. The firm has been bringing crab in from receiving points (chiefly Homer at present) and processing it here to accommodate a fresh-never-frozen requirement on a sustaining basis and, at the same time, preparing some of it for later sales by freezing it in both household and institutional packaging.

Stocks have also been arranged so that fresh halibut, sablefish and salmon is on hand locally with frozen products available when the fresh items are out of season.

A unique feature of this venture is an offering of filets and other prepared forms of ground fishes such as red snapper, ocean perch, sea bass, etc. that are being purchased from fishermen augmenting their otherwise-normal salmon fishing operations in places like Homer, Seward and Kodiak.

When these items have been offered in retail outlets heretofore they have been products brought here from Seattle, usually fresh-frozen. And some of them are actually stocks that were originally taken from coastal waters of the state.

This local fileting operation is on a pioneering basis and is contingent on the dual conditions of fishermen's persistence and successes as well as developing acceptable skills in the plant's crew of fish butchers and fileters. But if it succeeds technologically it should be a real boon for the local marketplace and consumers.

A major prospective user of this source of fish stocks is the military complex in Alaska. Included in the promotion is an effort to furnish the fish needs for both the military messhalls and the retail counters (PX) that provide foodstuffs for military families. Most of the fish products are now supplied from out of state.

Doyle reports that the Whitney-Fidalgo volume of business being handled at the present time is near the 6,000-pound-a-week level. And it has been in operation for less than two months.

The motivation for this innovation was admittedly no exclusively an altruistic desire to correct a chronic inequity by providing Alaska's non-fishing community with fresher and (hopefully) less costly products from their neighboring seas.

The major reason for the operation is strictly economic.

Whitney-Fidalgo operates two plants in Anchorage which is in a district that is not much of a fish source for industrial purposes. One of these plants is the cold storage plant and the other is the salmon cannery on Ship Creek flats that is usually termed the "Emard cannery" by old-timers.

These operations work with raw material that is hauled great distances, compared to the otherwise-normal processing stocks of fish factories. Some of their salmon was hauled all the way from Kotzebue in the Arctic (by air yet!) and some of their raw stocks come from as far east as Yakutat and as far west as Kodiak and Naknek.

Whitney-Fidalgo executives have said that they are convinced that the future is certain to witness the development of airlifted fish products—especially the more valuable varieties like some of the salmon species and shellfishes—and they are determined to be a part of such developments.

This means that they must operate, as economically as possible, on a year-'round basis and must put together a technically efficient staff and labor force that can handle the stuff they hope to trade in.

These requirements obviously should also be able to provide the necessary skills to produce and handle the fish needs of Alaska without exposing the products to a needless round trip to Seattle.

NEW IDAHO HIGHWAY ENFORCEMENT PROGRAM

HON. FRANK CHURCH

OF IDAHO

IN THE SENATE OF THE UNITED STATES

Tuesday, September 21, 1971

Mr. CHURCH. Mr. President, the current issue of the FBI Law Enforcement Bulletin contains an article by Capt. Ervin T. Dunn, of the Idaho State Police, in Boise, describing a new system developed by his agency to help enforce highway speeding laws by use of aircraft.

Captain Dunn writes:

In our program, we attempted to reduce violations where they were known to be excessive and, at the same time, to make it possible to measure the reduction for evaluation purposes. We developed some new methods that could make the use of aircraft in speed control programs much more practical and effective.

I am highly pleased that my own State has taken the lead in finding new ways to reduce measurably the incidence of excessive speed on our highways, which is a prime cause of traffic fatalities.

I ask unanimous consent that Captain Dunn's article be printed in the Extensions of Remarks.

There being no objection, the article was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

AN AIRCRAFT ENFORCEMENT TEST PROGRAM

(By Capt. Ervin T. Dunn)

Aircraft enforcement of speed regulations is not a new technique; it has been used and is still being used by many States. Even though the procedures from State to State vary to some degree, in a broad general sense they are quite similar.

These programs use various types of aircraft, different lengths of measured distances for determining speeds, and many methods of planning when and where the planes are to be used. There are numerous and varied markings on the highways for pilots to use in making their calculations and for the motoring public to see. Most of them have a decided psychological effect on the motorist.

In our program we attempted to reduce violations where they were known to be excessive and, at the same time, make it possible to measure the reduction for evaluation purposes. We developed some new methods that could make the use of aircraft in speed control programs much more practical and effective.

Our project was conceived on November 2, 1970, but, because of pilot difficulties and pilot training, it was December 8 before speed enforcement on the selected area began. Two months was the period of time allocated to the program, a short time as tests go, but we hoped this period would give the same picture as if it had been set up several months, or even a year. The program was to test whether aircraft patrol would reduce the number of accidents and fatalities on a given stretch of road; in this particular case, 150 miles made up of 82 miles of 70 m.p.h. divided interstate, 20 miles of 2-lane 70 m.p.h. road, and 48 miles of 2-lane 60 m.p.h. road. One hundred fifty miles is a long distance, of course, to patrol with one piece of equipment in hopes of influencing the behavior of drivers and, at the same time, measuring the effect within a 2-month period.

The program began with two main assumptions that seemed reasonable and valid. First, the bulk of serious accidents and fatalities are caused by speed, which almost always ranks first on "accident causes" lists. Second, data collected on fatalities over a specific collected on fatalities over a specific stretch of road can be misleading because one accident can produce several fatalities and render the information practically useless or, at least, difficult to understand as far as control of fatal accidents over the given distance is concerned.

Further, we also knew that any data collected on accidents or accident rate for the test span of roadway could be adversely affected because this was the time of year when slick roads and sudden storms could bring a rash of accidents that would not be indicative of normal accident rates.

PRESSING NEED

Our need to have the information by a certain date was the reason the program was put into effect in the late fall and winter, but we were reasonably certain there would be enough clear days and clear highways to finish the survey. The program was designed to cover 60 days with approximately 44 days of flight time. However, because of inclement weather, the 44 days were reduced to 27 days in the air. On several of these days flight time was reduced by more than half, and it was impossible to cover all of the 150 miles of selected highway on those days. We checked all 150 miles only 14 times during the program.

Since the fatality rate and the accident rate would require such a long period before either would or could show a reasonable response to the aircraft enforcement program, a plan was adopted to control the speed violation rate which included measuring this rate from time to time to make certain of the desired results. We felt the control of the violation rate would eventually control the accident and fatality rates because both seemed to be directly related to the violation rate.

Vital parts of the survey, we feel, were the system used to measure the size of the problem before the aircraft was employed and the system used to measure the effect of the aircraft on that problem, from time to time, to determine if the program was doing the job of reducing the violation rate, and to what degree. This was done with a speed computer system the author designed and copyrighted. This computer system makes it possible to place the survey car from three-eighths to one-half mile away from any highway and instantly and accurately compute the speeds of vehicles seen traveling on that highway from that vantage point.

The advantages to this system are that speed surveys can be taken without the motorist's being aware that his speed is being computed, and his speed is not influenced by cars or equipment on the right-of-way, which does have a deterrent effect on getting accurate figures for speeds.

One feature of the program was the method of selecting cars to be checked. The speed of the driver was not necessarily considered for putting him in the survey or leaving him out. The chief requisite had to be that he was free to travel at any speed he might choose. In other words, it would not be beyond belief to visualize 100 cars strung out behind a truck they could not pass, and the result would be a 100-car survey with no violators of the posted speed. Large trucks were also eliminated from the survey because we felt aircraft would have little or no effect upon their speeds, and most of them were not free to travel at any speed they chose, being restricted by company policies, tachometers, and revolutions-per-minute recommendations for equipment. Loads, themselves, would be restrictive to some degree. If a motorist was free to travel at any speed he might choose, he was entered in the survey. If not, he was left out.

100-CAR SEGMENTS

Almost all of the tests were based on 100-car segments because it was learned that 100 cars passing a given point on the highway would be indicative of how all traffic by that point for the balance of the day would proceed. Two studies were run for a 24-hour period to give a clearer picture of driving behavior at different hours of a day, but they merely bore out that a 100-car test would give a good cross section of what could be expected of the traffic.

The No. 1 survey, prior to putting the aircraft in the air on speed enforcement, was actually five separate surveys of the 150-mile selected stretch and was done to give a picture of the violation rate on the stretch under normal conditions. Most of the figures shown as violations in the surveys (see chart) represent speeds of 1, 2, 3, and up to 10 m.p.h. above the posted speeds. Speeds of 80 to 90 m.p.h. represented approximately 10 percent of the violations, and there were speeds of well above 100 m.p.h. (a little over one-half of 1 percent) on the freeway sections of the test area. Excessive rain at one position prevented the collection of any conclusive data.

SECOND SURVEY

The No. 2 survey was also five separate surveys and was taken after the program had been put into effect. One plane had flown the area for a total of about 60 hours and had assisted ground crews in making 87 arrests for speeding and in issuing 30 warning cards. The violation rates during this survey are shown in the chart. Milepost 162 on this survey represents the one that had previously been rained out. There are a noticeable reduction in the violation rates at three sites and an increase at Milepost 109.9 which was shocking to the survey crew. We later discovered that this was a patrol area posted 60 m.p.h. and bound on each end by a 70 m.p.h. posting. Drivers were coming off a 70 m.p.h. freeway, going through a small town, then right out into the 60 m.p.h. zone. In all probability, a reevaluation of the 60 m.p.h. posting will be seriously considered.

An aircraft enforcement program could well be a means of pointing out needs for speed posting reevaluations from time to time.

EVALUATION

A second evaluation of the aircraft program was made at the close of the flight program (completed after 141 hours flight time). At that time, the violation rates were taken again at four of the five selected locations, and most showed the movement of the extremely high speeder downward into speeds within our tolerance areas. We were again unable to make a survey at Milepost 162 because the road was broken up and repair crews were in the area. Milepost 109.9 continued to show increases in some of the high speeds. There were, however, excellent enforcement results on each flight, with many arrests made in the 90 to 100 m.p.h. range. There were approximately 140 arrests made altogether during the program with almost all violations for 85 m.p.h. or more. In addition, there were 40 warning cards issued for speeds above 75 m.p.h.

DOUBLE USE

Another interesting part of the Idaho Aircraft Enforcement Test System is that the same computer system used to make the initial survey was used in the aircraft to determine speeds of the motorists. The system does not require special measured distances or marks on the highways other than the white centerlines that are already there. The white centerlines are placed with mechanical accuracy that can be predetermined.

The three big advantages are: The system does not require measured distances painted on the surface of the highway and does not confine the plane to those places where measured distances appear. Because the speed of an approaching car can be checked in 4 to 5 seconds, it is possible to check the speeds of traffic coming toward the plane, and turnarounds are unnecessary except in those cases where an already checked violator is wanted. The third factor is that one patrol car can follow the plane at approximately 55 m.p.h. over long distances. The patrolman's getting 4 or 5 miles behind creates no problem because the pilot is checking the speeds of the heavy traffic going in the opposite direction from the plane. When the pilot finds a violator, he turns around and follows the speeder back to the trailing car, describing him to the patrolman by radio. It is possible to check the violator's speed several times while going back to the trailing patrol car.

The computer system makes use of the fact that every speed is directly related to every other speed through time and does not need measured distances to make the computations. The system has been in use in Idaho as an enforcement tool on the ground since 1956 and has been used from aircraft several times in selected cases.

EFFECTIVENESS

The aircraft enforcement program has proven a very effective instrument for bringing enforcement pressure on exceedingly high-speed drivers. One plane and a trailing patrol car using the system can cover from 50 to 75 miles of assigned highway with plenty of work to keep both pilot and patrolman busy. Highways with 300 to 400-cars-per-hour volume are ideal for this situation.

From his 1,000 to 1,500-foot up-in-the-air seat, the pilot can observe 5 to 6 miles of highway most of the time, check the entire 50 or 75-mile length in a very few minutes and pick out almost every violator of the posted speeds.

In addition to speed enforcement, the plane can also be used for other functions, such as, search for lost hunters, surveillance of slow-moving traffic problems, surveillance of school bus routes and problems, check of little-used highways occasionally, observation of double-line areas, and location of stolen, abandoned, and stripped cars in out-of-the-way places. These additional uses make the plane a valuable piece of standard equipment even if it were only assigned to speed enforcement on selected occasions.

Generally, the program was too short in length and covered too many miles. It is a good program where enforcement results are needed in connection with high speeds over open highways. There were problems with weather and a definite problem in connection with assignment of personnel to work the program. The program would work much better where plane and personnel needed are assigned to the project for the duration. Then one car could follow the plane over long distances and return the same day without assignment from separate districts.

COMPARISON OF COSTS

After making a comparison of costs for lease and purchase of a tandem 2-place plane and a 4-place plane, we decided to lease a 2-place aircraft. The cost of the program will run slightly over $2,300 over and above regular budget items. There will be around $2,000 collected in fines and costs.

OBSERVATIONS

Final reports on arrests and fines are not complete at this time. The program can bring a tremendous amount of enforcement pressure on speeders in well-selected areas. Results can be tabulated and evaluations made, but a continuing program of this nature needs much more planning and preparation than was possible for this project. The project would work exceptionally well for special occasions and problem assignments.

MINNEAPOLIS HEALTH HEARINGS

HON. DONALD M. FRASER

OF MINNESOTA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, September 21, 1971

Mr. FRASER. Mr. Speaker, the health needs of our youth were aptly demonstrated by two witnesses who testified during the recently held Minneapolis health hearings. Pointing out that the health needs of our youth are vastly different from those of other age groups, Mr. Jim Brink discussed the operation which he heads, the Southeast Drop-In Center.

This organization, comprising interested laymen, attempts to deal with problems facing juveniles on a preventive basis. Recognizing that most young people with drug problems will come to the center needing treatment, members of the center attempt to move from strictly treating bad trips to discovering the underlying reasons for drug use. These dedicated laymen have discovered that some of the young find it extremely difficult to deal with the larger, public institutions in the twin cities. The drop in center, therefore, provides a middle ground between the public institutions and the concern which leads to involvement of those people who wish to help. When the problem becomes extremely serious, referrals to professionals are made.

Mr. Brink argued persuasively for everyone to consider youth drug problems as essentially mental health problems. It is his belief that only by starting from this premise and involving the lay members of the community can the serious drug problem of youth be prevented.

Another center attempting to solve some of the problems facing youth in the twin cities is the Children's Health Center and Hospital. This organization established a teen-age medical service and a walk in counseling center.

At the hearings, Dr. Elizabeth Jerome detailed some of the activities of the center. The medical center, for example, is staffed by 15 volunteer physicians, 35 nurses, and five volunteer lab technicians. These professionals see approximately 500 youths per month. Open 3 nights a week and 3 mornings during the week, the medical center draws from all areas of the twin cities.

The walk in counseling center is opened every evening and is staffed by 30 volunteer professional psychologists. These psychologists supervise approximately 50 students in training who serve approximately 6 months at the center. A further breakdown of the services provided is enclosed at the end of the report.

One of the startling discoveries related by Dr. Jerome was the degree of alienation of these youth. Many were medically alienated from their family physician or from their own parents. These youth sought service at the clinic. Also, many parents bring their own children to the center. That is a significant tribute to the need that the center fills.

Since the hearings, the Children's Health Center has received financial assistance to continue these two programs. A statement explaining that financial award in more detail appears below.

These centers, the teenage medical service and the walk in counseling center are major innovative steps attempting to deal with the specific problems facing youth. They deserve encouragement from elected officials and require broad support from the community. They are examples of a response to a need that is not based on financial incentives. We should look at the motivation of the laymen and professionals who donate their time and expertise. Ignoring these motivations may cause us to develop a system concerned only with financial rewards.

The statement follows:

MAJOR GRANTS TO CHILDREN'S HEALTH CENTER BROADEN AID TO TEENAGERS

Two grants totaling $132,930 have been awarded to Children's Health Center, Inc. of Minneapolis (CHC) for its satellite clinics, the Teen-Age Medical Service and affiliated Walk-In Counseling Center.

A grant of $72,460 was awarded from the Department of Health, Education and Welfare to develop demonstration projects in the two clinics for the health care of teenagers. "The money is to be used to develop a more personalized style of health services for that group of tennagers who are currently not accepting health services through our established institutions," according to Dr. Arnold S. Anderson, Principal Executive Officer of Children's Health Center, Inc.

The two clinics function as a bridge across the "generation gap" and the developmental monies from this grant will be used to strengthen that bridge.

"Initially, development funds will be used to explore means of re-establishing family involvement in health problems of "alienated" teenagers, and to explore the use of consumer inputs from the teenagers themselves in the management of the operations," said Dr. Anderson.

Fifth District Representative Donald Fraser was helpful in making known to the Office of Child Development in Washington, D.C. the unique value of the functions of the two clinics.

The second grant, totaling $60,470, comes from the Governor's Commission on Crime Prevention and Control through the City of Minneapolis. It will enable the clinics to establish a project to evaluate their programs and centers; to coordinate their activities; to establish liaison with criminal justice and health agencies; and to gather data on the kinds of problems they see and treat. The information will be made available to other community resources and to colleges and universities for use in training social workers, police officers, health professionals, etc.

The Teen-Age Medical Service and Walk-In Counseling Center operate out of two older houses located side by side at 2425 and 2421 Chicago Avenue, Minneapolis. Opened in 1969, the Teen-Age Clinic has treated over 8,500 youths between the ages of 10 and 20 free of charge. Together, both clinics have seen over 11,000 patients.

The site of the new Chidlren's Health Center building, now under construction, is a half block south of the free clinics at 25th and Chicago Avenue.

U.S. CHROME ORE SUPPLY

HON. HARRY F. BYRD, JR.

OF VIRGINIA

IN THE SENATE OF THE UNITED STATES

Tuesday, September 21, 1971

Mr. BYRD of Virginia. Mr. President, an excellent editorial on the subject of the U.S. position with respect to its chrome ore supply was published in the Hopkinsville, Ky., New Era of August 28, 1971.

I ask unanimous consent that the editorial, entitled "Wrong Direction," be printed in the Extensions of Remarks.

There being no objection, the editorial was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

WRONG DIRECTION

Does it make sense that a nation should be dependent upon a potential enemy to supply a material which would be needed in case of armed conflict?

Sen. Harry F. Byrd Jr., the Virginia Independent doesn't think so, but he seems to be having a hard time convincing enough people around official Washington that the old cavalry would never have pushed the Indians out of the West if the Army had had to wait for the Redmen to sell the soldiers enought arrows to wage war.

But the Virginia senator refuses to be discouraged and has introduced a piece of legislation which is vital to the future of the United States as a free nation. Presumably the Congress will get around to taking up the Byrd bill when the recess is over next month.

Byrd's bill provides simply that importation of strategic materials from a Free World country cannot be prohibited so long as imports of the same commodities are permitted from a Communist country.

The purpose of this provision is to correct an almost insane situation which has been permitted to develop and which now endangers America's capacity to defend herself in case of Soviet aggression. This is the refusal of the United States to buy chrome ore, vital to defense production, from Rhodesia, and its increasing reliance upon none other than Russia for this strategic material.

The United States refuses to trade with Rhodesia because it is ruled by a minority government and allegedly is a threat to international peace. As a consequence, the U.S. now buys a major portion of its chrome ore from the Soviet Union, a country which is ruled by a brutal one-party dictatorship and constantly instigates threats to world peace.

The result is that the United States has made its defense production dependent upon the very nation we are supposed to be defending ourselves against. Dependence now is estimated at more than 50 percent. It will go higher to the point of paralyzing American defenses unless our elected representatives stir themselves.

Byrd's legislation would have the effect of reopening trade with Rhodesia and easing the Soviet grip on America's defenses. The issue is nothing less than our survival as a free and independent nation, but official Washington today is so caught up in false hopes of peace that neither the administration nor Congress will act unless they hear from the people.

We may be foolish enough to arm the Soviets in case a shooting war gets near, but you can bet the Russians wouldn't do the same for us.

PROSPERITY AND PRODUCTIVITY

HON. THOMAS M. PELLY

OF WASHINGTON

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, September 21, 1971

Mr. PELLY. Mr. Speaker, the nationwide response to President Nixon's wage-price freeze has surprised some of the previous critics of his economic policies. In the first month following the President's historic speech on the economy, Americans in all walks of life have indicated newly restored confidence in the measures proposed by Mr. Nixon to end inflation and bring prosperity to the Nation. Meanwhile, there seems to be a willingness to sacrifice, and, while the program, and especially the wage-price freeze, creates some inequities, and, in some instances, hardships, the reaction of Americans in general is one of patriotic determination to do their part toward making the freeze work voluntarily.

So, Mr. Speaker, we can look back at the last 30 days with satisfaction and now turn our attention to a phase 2 plan to follow the 90-day freeze. This issue is not to play politics with the presidential election next year. The plan to protect our economy involves the living standard and livelihood of the American worker who has a vital stake in the stability of the American dollar and the ability of our Nation to maintain its industrial leadership in the face of ever-growing foreign competition.

Economists do not all agree as to the proper and fairest solution. However, I venture to say America will not halt its inflation and restore prosperity until in this country production per man-hour is in balance with the cost per man-hour. Rising costs have priced U.S. goods out of the marketplace both abroad and at home and U.S. capital has fled to foreign countries to meet this situation.

I do not blame labor for seeking more for its services. I do blame management for yielding on wages without gaining assurances of increased production. Collective bargaining seems to be failing and the strike weapon seems neither to benefit the worker nor management but instead penalizes the consumer and the public.

So, Mr. Speaker, as I see it today this country must seek alternatives in labor-management relations and greater production should be the basis of increased wages if we are going to curb inflation and reduce unemployment.

Congress will try to meet the economic crisis with a new tax program, but I doubt if such a plan succeeds unless there is greater incentive to workers and management alike for increased productivity.

AMERICANS WANT TO PRAY; CHURCHES DO NOT WANT THEM TO

HON. JOHN R. RARICK

OF LOUISIANA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, September 21, 1971

Mr. RARICK. Mr. Speaker, while the people of America want their children to be able to pray in school, the churches object, claiming this would "take away religious freedom."

We now learn that 208 of the 218 required Members of the House have responded to public opinion and the outpouring of faith from the people and signed the discharge petition to force a House vote on the prayer amendment that would restore the right of American schoolchildren to engage in nondenominational prayer, a right that all Americans had enjoyed until abrogated by judicial fiat in the Supreme Court decisions of 1962 and 1963.

We are also told that the principal opposition to such a prayer petition comes from religious groups including the American Baptist Convention, Baptist General Conference, North American Baptist Conference, the executive council of the Episcopal Church, United Methodist Church, Church of the Brethern, Lutheran Church in America, United Presbyterian Church, Unitarian-Universalist Association, Churches of Christ, Mennonites, and 12 different Jewish groups.

I include a related news article detailing this paradox in the RECORD:

[From the Washington Star, Sept. 20, 1971]

SCHOOL PRAYER FIGHT REKINDLED IN HOUSE

(By Ronald Sarro)

The long-smoldering school prayer controversy has been rekindled in the House and may come to a vote soon.

Few members anticipated that Rep. Chalmers P. Wylie, R-Ohio, would have much success when he filed a petition April 1 to force a House vote on the issue.

But at the close of House business last week, 208 of the 218 members required had signed the petition, and it appeared Wylie might obtain the remaining 10 signatures.

Opposing religious groups have just launched a counter campaign to get Congressmen not to sign, or to remove their names if they have signed.

At issue is a proposed constitutional amendment, locked in the Judiciary Committee for years. Wylie's petition would force the committee to release the amendment for a House vote.

Supporters say the amendment would put prayer back in the classrooms and overcome 1962 and 1963 Supreme Court decisions banning organized prayer in public schools.

Opponents say the amendment actually would take away individual religious freedom. A committee of 38 national religious leaders and organizations urged Congress Friday to reject the amendment.

Support for a vote in the House has been building steadily, mainly because of the lobbying efforts of Mrs. Ben Ruhlin of Cuyahoga, Ohio, and her 30-member Prayer Cam-

ASSOCIATION OF THE NATIONAL MOVEMENTS AGAINST AMERICAN DANGER IN EUROPE

Berlin - Bonn - Heidelberg - Frankfurt/Main

No. 9/73 What does Nixon wants in Europe?

Disqualified as President of the USA by numarous affairs (among others, assassination of President Kennedy, Watergate, etc.), Nixon wants to improve his status by a "successful" tour of Europe. In preparation of this tour he had the year 1973 declared with utmost dispatch, as the "European Year" of American foreign politics, and announced the project of a renewal of the Atlantic Charter.

Indeed, the relationship Europe-USA requires a revisal! However, the reorganization cannot be orientated according to the wishes of Mr Nixon and Co, but must be based on the solid foundation of the economic and monetary increase of power in Europe, and take into consideration all relevant changes of the recent past.

Nixon pretends to be interested in a relationship of partners with equal rights. Already the limitations of European rights in regional questions, and the reservation to safeguard world-wide interests, belie Nixon's words.

Europe must, in order to strengthen its unity, surmount the subordination to the USA!

Nixon demands from Europe, not to exclude American products from the Common Market of the partner countries and the associated countries. This demand affects the foundations of the Common Market on the whole, and is therefore not acceptable to the EEC. Thanks to the economic constellation, which cannot be retrograded, such interventions must be defeated without further ceremony.

Europe needs its own independent economic field, which must not be insecured by US concerns. The steadily growing US investments in Europe, which are estimated to reach 6,1 billion dollars in 1973, and with their total book-value of 35 billion dollars (=market value of about 100 billion dollars), are undermining the safety of the European market, and must be repressed, in favor of a real Europeanization of enterprises.

ENCLOSURE

Nixon demands that the Europeans contribute their full share of the defense costs, meaning, among others, financing of American troops in Europe. If Nixon would be realy interested in an European-American partnership (see above), he could give the most persuasive demonstrations particularly in this field. The European adaequate safety model includes the creation of an European defense union, which takes full responsibility for Europe, and promotes, within the scope of an Atlantic Alliance, mutual obligations for assistance with the American partner. However, Nixon is not thinking of such alternative.

Europe needs autonomy on the defense field!

Instead, Nixon promised that the American troops in Europe, which are humiliating the European self-assertion, will stay in Europe, despite the fact that they have lost long time ago their halo as deterrents. Formerly safety factors, they are now steadily raising the general uncertainty (doubts as to their reliability, demoralized soldiers and officers). All indications are pointing to it that they no longer serve as deterrents against the threat of communism, but are here to safeguard American interests against Europe!

Europe does not need a foreign rule from overseas, which, in addition infiltrates the continent with drugs, criminality and immorality.

Nixon expects, that his anachronistic demands are particularly impressing the Europeans by his personal engagement. The reactions in the European capitals to the proposals Kissinger/Nixon were observant and cool. The foreign ministers of the European market have unanimously determined during their meeting in Luxembourg in June, that the EEC is in no hurry to give an answer to the proposed alterations of the Atlantic Charter. According to the informations on hand, there is no doubt that Nixon's interlocutors will assume European viewpoints.

Europe needs its own unmistakable identity, free of American attributes.

The period of European-American confrontation has started. Europe cannot continue to develop without a collision with the USA. Naturally, this phase of unavoidable conflicts does not preclude a cooperation with the USA, as far as it is in European interests. The need of the moment is the consolidation of European power. Europe has just started to show its strength, and to gain the respect due to her.

Europeans, manifest to Nixon and his followers your firm determination to give the European Community the preference over the Atlantic Alliance.

Europeans, you must show in various ways your European identity, and emphasize the deep alienation between Europe and America.

"Alarming Anti-Americanism"

The Headquarters of the US Army in Europe, and Seventh Army in Heidelberg, are observing with great alarm the dangerous growth of anti-Americanism, particularly within the area of Seventh Army. It is true, that many high-ranking officers welcome the efforts of the German public to play down the development of anti-Americanism, however, they are stressing at the same time that they are not deceived by the real proportions of these efforts. During personal talks, among others, also during discussion rounds with General Davison concerning German-American relations, they got the impression that the German partner is progressively less willing to listen to American ideas, is often not keeping his promises, and articulates German wishes as demands. Under such conditions expressions of sympathy are felt to be pure pharisaism.

Representatives of the Embassy in Bonn have acknowledged that similar observations have been made in the civilian sector. The Embassy is in the possession of evidence, according to which the results of the opinion-poll by the institutes INFAS and Infratest were set up in a way to make them "endurable" to the Americans.

Officers want to go home

Lately, General Davison's political adviser was forced to present his chief with an "unpleasant" information. He complained that the officers of the US Army in Europe are increasingly joining the opinion voiced by Senator Mansfield (see report of 24.7.73,to the senat committee for foreign affairs) and Church (see last page). Most frequently the opinion is expressed that the military presence of the USA in Europe is not vital for American national interests, and the costs which the USA has to pay to keep its troops in Europe, are needed for other budgetary expenses. He also stated that in many cases US officers are contacting firms at home, in case of their discharge from the Army. (See No 2/73).

Such motives and other reasons induce numerous members of the American Forces to send their dependents back to the USA.

Special authorization for the American Military Intelligence Service.

During the past days the American Military Intelligence Service in the FRG started a large-scale campaign to spy on enemies of present American politics. The afflicted circle of persons includes Americans, who are suspected to sympathize with the democratic party in the USA, or to be so-called isolationists, as well as Germans, who have strongly criticized the USA in public. This campaign uses a range of instrumentations, from tapping of telephones, photographic surveillance, to the opening of mail. Reason: Prophylactic safety measures for the expected visit of President Nixon. The campaign will continue also after the visit.

Superfluous nuclear weapons in Europe

Today, US politicians and military persons are talking openly about the fact that the relocation of nuclear weapons to Europe was done without sufficient conceptional pre-planning, and has become incredible from the military viewpoint.

Was will NIXON in Europa?

Als Präsident der USA durch zahlreiche Affären (u.a. Ermordnung Präsident Kennedys, Watergate) disqualifizier will sich NIXON durch eine "erfolgreiche" Europarcise aufwerten. In Vorbereitung seiner Tour ließ er 1973 eilfertig zum "europäischen Jahr" der amerikanischen Außenpolitik erklären und das Projekt der Erneuerung der Atlantik-Charta verkünden.

Das Verhältnis Europa-USA ist tatsächlich revisionsbedürftig! Nur kann sich die Neuordnung nicht an den Wünschen der Mr. NIXON & Co. orientieren, sondern muß auf dem soliden Fundament des wirtschaftlichen und monetären Machtzuwachses Europas begründet sein und alle einschlägigen Veränderungen der letzten-Zeit berücksichtigen.

NIXON gibt vor, an einem Verhältnis gleichberechtigter Partnerschaft interessiert zu sein. Allein schon die Beschränkung der Rechte Europas auf regionale Fragen und der Vorbehalt der Wahrnehmung weltweiter Interessen durch die USA strafen NIXON-Lügen.

NIXON verlangt von Europa, daß die amerikanischen Waren vom Gemeinsamen Markt der Mitgliedsländer und der assoziierten Staaten nicht ausgeschlossen werden. Diese Forderung berührt die Grundlagen des Gemeinsamen Marktes überhaupt und ist deshalb für die EG nicht akzeptabel. Dank der nicht rückgängig zu machenden ökonomischen Konstellation sind derartige Interventionen ohne weiteres zu vereiteln.

Europa braucht ein eigenes abgeschlossenes Wirtschaftsgebiet, in das keine Unsicherheit durch US-Konzerne getragen werden darf. Die ständig anwachsenden US-Investitionen in Europa, die für 1973 mit 6,1 Mrd. Dollar angegeben werden und damit einen Gesamtbuchwert von 35 Mrd. Dollar (=Marktwert von ca. 100 Mrd. Dollar) ausmachen, unterhöhlen die Sicherheit des europäischen Marktes und müssen zugunsten echter Europäisierung der Unternehmen zurückgedrängt werden.

NIXON fordert volle Beteiligung der Europäer an den Verteidigungslasten und meint damit u.a. die Finanzierung der amerikanischen Truppen in Europa. Wäre NIXON wirklich an einer europäisch-amerikanischen Partnerschaft (s. o.!) gelegen, so könnte er gerade auf diesem Gebiet den überzeugendsten Beweis führen. Das Europa adäquate Sicherheitsmodell beinhaltet die Schaffung einer europäischen Verteidigungsunion, die die Aufgaben in Europa vollverantwortlich wahrnimmt und im Rahmen eines atlantischen Bündnisses mit dem amerikanischen Partner gegenseitige Beistandspflichten begründet. Aber eine solche Alternative hat NIXON nicht im Auge.

Europa braucht Autonomie auf dem Gebiete der Verteidigung!

NIXON verspricht stattdessen den weiteren Verbleib der das europäische Selbstbewußtsein demütigenden amerikanischen Truppen in Europa, obwohl sie den Nymbus der Abschreckung längst verloren haben. Ehemals Sicherheitsfaktor, erhöhen sie heute ständig die allgemeine Unsicherheit (Zweifel an ihrer Zuverlässigkeit, demoralisierte Soldaten und Offiziere). Alle Anzeichen sprechen dafür, daß sie nicht mehr der Abwehr der Bedrohung durch den Kommunismus dienen, sondern der Sicherung amerikanischer Interessen gegenüber Europa!

Europa braucht keine Fremdherrschaft aus Übersee, die den Kontinent zudem mit Rauschgift, Kriminalität und Unmoral infiltriert.

NIXON erwartet, daß die anachronistischen Forderungen die Europäer durch sein persönliches Engagement sonderlich beeindrucken. Die Reaktion in den europäischen Hauptstädten auf die Vorschläge KISSINGER/ NIXON war abwartend und kühl. Die Außenminister der EG haben auf ihrem Treffen im Juni in Luxemburg einmütig festgestellt, daß die EG mit einer Antwort auf die vorgeschlagene Erneuerung der Atlantik-Charta keine Eile hat. Und uns vorliegenden Informationen zufolge besteht kein Zweifel, daß NIXONS Gesprächspartner europäische Standpunkte einnehmen werden.

Europa braucht seine eigene, unverwechselbare und von amerikanischen Attributen freie Identität.

Die Periode der europäisch-amerikanischen Konfrontation ist angebrochen. Die Entfaltung Europas kann ohne Kollisionen mit den USA nicht vorankommen. Selbstverständlich schließt diese Phase der unvermeidlichen Konflikte Zusammenarbeit mit den USA nicht aus, soweit sie in europäischem Interesse erfolgt. Das Gebot der Stunde ist die Konsolidierung europäischer Macht. Europa hat erst begonnen, seine Kraft zu zeigen und sich die gebührende Achtung zu verschaffen.

Europäer, bekundet NIXON und seinen Anhängern die unerschütterliche Entschlossenheit, der europäischen Gemeinschaft den Vorzug vor der Atlantischen Allianz zu geben!

Europäer, zeigt auf vielfältige Weise europäische Identität und macht die tiefe Entfremdung zwischen Europa und Amerika deutlich!

"Besorgnis erregender Antiamerikanismus"

Im Hauptquartier der amerikanischen Armee in Europa und der 7. Armee in Heidelberg wird das gefährliche Anwachsen des Antiamerikanismus, insbes. im Bereich der 7. US-Armee, mit großer Besorgnis verfolgt. Viele hohe Offiziere begrüßen zwar die Bemühungen in der deutschen Öffentlichkeit, die Entwicklung des Antiamerikanismus zu bagatellisieren, betonen aber gleichzeitig, daß sie sich dadurch nicht über das wahre Ausmaß täuschen lassen. Sie hätten in persönlichen Gesprächen, unter anderem auch in den Diskussionsrunden von General DAVISON über deutsch-amerikanische Beziehungen, den Eindruck gewonnen, daß die deutschen Partner amerikanischen Gedanken immer schwieriger zugänglich werden, ihre Zusagen oft nicht einhalten und deutsche Wünsche stärker als Forderungen artikulieren. Unter solchen Umständen würden die Sympathiekundgebungen als pure Heuchelei empfunden.
Vertreter der Botschaft in Bonn bestätigen, daß im zivilen Bereich ähnliche Beobachtungen gemacht wurden. So verfüge die Botschaft über Beweismaterial, wonach die betr. Meinungsumfragen durch die Institute INFAS und Infratest derart angelegt wurden, daß das Resultat für die Amerikaner zu "ertragen" sei.

Heimkehrwillige Offiziere

Der politische Berater von General DAVISON kam kürzlich nicht umhin, seinem Chef "unerfreuliche" Informationen zu präsentieren. So beklagte er, daß sich im Offizierscorps der US-Army in Europa zur Truppenpräsenz und zu ähnlichen Fragen zunehmend solche Meinungen durchsetzen, wie sie u. a. von den Senatoren MANSFIELD (s. Bericht vom 24. 7. dieses Jahres an den Senatsausschuß für Auswärtige Angelegenheiten) und CHURCH (s. letzte Seite) vertreten werden. Am häufigsten wird erklärt, daß die militärische Präsenz der USA in Europa für Amerikas nationale Interessen nicht lebenswichtig ist und daß die Kosten, die die USA für die Stationierung ihrer Truppen in Europa aufbringen müssen, bei anderen Etatposten fehlen. Weiter führte er aus, daß sich die Fälle mehren, in denen US-Offiziere Verbindungen zu Firmen ihrer Heimatorte für den Fall ihres Ausscheidens aus der Army aufnehmen (Vgl. Nr. 2/73!).

Derartige Motive und andere Gründe bestimmen zahlreiche Angehörige der amerikanischen Streitkräfte, ihre Angehörigen in die Staaten zurückzuschicken.

Sondervollmachten für den amerikanischen militärischen Nachrichtendienst

In diesen Tagen wurde eine großangelegte Aktion zur Bespitzelung von Gegnern der gegenwärtigen amerikanischen Politik durch den amerikanischen militärischen Nachrichtendienst in der Bundesrepublik Deutschland begonnen. Der betroffene Personenkreis umfaßt sowohl Amerikaner, die der Sympathie für die Demokratische Partei der USA oder als sogen. Isolationisten verdächtig sind, als auch Deutsche, die mit massiver Kritik an den USA in der Öffentlichkeit hervorgetreten sind. Das zur Anwendung gebrachte Instrumentarium reicht vom Telefon abhören über fotografische Überwachung bis zum Öffnen der Post. Begründung: Prophylaktische Sicherheitsvorkehrungen für den Präsidentenbesuch. Diese Aktion soll auch später weitergeführt werden.

Überflüssige Nuklearwaffen in Europa

US-Politiker und Militärs sprechen heute offen darüber, daß die Verlegung der Nuklearwaffen nach Europa ohne genügende konzeptionelle Vorplanung erfolgte und nunmehr unter militärischen Gesichtspunkten unglaubwürdig geworden ist.

JAMES BYRON ANDERSON
Alleged Threats to

FRANK CHURCH; V; Calif

Cal. F.

On December 31, 1975, the Sacramento Office of the Federal Bureau of Investigation received a telephone call from an individual identifying himself as James Byron Anderson, date of birth November 25, 1927, home address 2601 D Street, Sacramento. Anderson advised that he was calling in response to the December 31, 1975, Sacramento Union newspaper article entitled "Death Threats to CIA Foes." He advised that the UPI article stated that the FBI was investigating threats to the lives of Democratic Presidential Candidate Fred Harris and three members of Congress, Senator Frank Church and Representatives Otis Pike and Ronald Dellums, and that he felt the FBI was looking for him for writing these letters.

On January 2, 1976, James Byron Anderson voluntarily appeared at the FBI Office, Sacramento, and was interviewed regarding letters that he stated he had written. Anderson was advised of his constitutional rights and consented to interview. Anderson stated that he had been concerned about the shortage of oil and the energy crisis in this country and, as a result, he embarked on a program to lobby against ecology. He advised that he had planned on using a letter writing campaign with a nonexistent organization, the California Professional Society, as a letterhead to add importance to his communications. He stated that he has been sending materials and letters to the same Congressmen since September, 1972, and he does not recall writing anyone else except the above-mentioned Congressmen.

This document contains neither recommendations nor conclusions of the FBI. It is the property of the FBI and is loaned to your agency; it and its contents are not to be distributed outside your agency.

Anderson further advised that on December 19 or 20, 1975, he mailed materials, which included a letter, to Senators Church, Clark and Tunney. The contents of the letter was as follows:

"Honorable Jackass:

"Any man who destroys the security of his country is guilty of treason.

"We are out of oil. Leave the executive branch of government alone or the people will rise up and kill you."

Anderson stated that he meant no threat to the Senators, but that he was only attempting to prove a point. Anderson was admonished for writing letters which could be construed as a threat. In addition, he was advised that it was a federal violation to mail threatening communications. Anderson stated that although he was going to continue his letter writing campaign, that he would refrain from writing any threatening type statements.

The facts concerning this matter were discussed with Assistant U. S. Attorney Richard Nichols, Sacramento, on January 5, 1976. Mr. Nichols advised that he would decline prosecution on Anderson as this matter lacks sufficient prosecutive potential and that Anderson's statements appear to be warnings and not direct threats.

On January 5, 1976, the above information regarding Anderson was provided to Special Agent [redacted] U. S. Secret Service, Sacramento, California. b6 b7C

GENERAL INVESTIGATIVE DIVISION

This concerns the matter wherein on 11/28/75, Senator Frank Church's office received an anonymous telephone call advising that an assassination attempt would be made against Senator Church because of the activities of the Senate Select Committee. Caller made subsequent call 12/1/75.

Attached advises caller made three calls to Church's office 12/2/75, and in one identified himself as Abrom Hisler, Rockville, Maryland. Investigation has identified Hisler, born 1/24/23, as a former employee at Goddard Space Flight Center (GSFC), with long history of problems at GSFC and of questionable mental stability. During calls, Hisler stated he did not intend any threatening comments regarding Church, but only had a feeling of the Senator possibly being assassinated. He felt it was his civic duty to report an attempt on the Senator's life. It is noted investigation discloses no threats actually made.

Assistant U. S. Attorney Kaplan, Washington, D. C., advises case lacks prosecutive merit. No further investigation being conducted.

Above being furnished should Senator Church mention same in any conversations Bureau officials may have with him.

WFO will advise Bureau of results of Capitol Police contact with HISLER.

Telephone conversation of December 1, 9:50 a.m.

This conversation made little sense to me. He began by saying that he would give me a statement to give Senator Church that was "in capital letters."

"LTKS for let the truth be know so all know. I suggest that you put a slash with the letters DC and under the letters DC put a period and the letters TG and under T put a dash and following that the words change purse. Next to the second dash put GSFC Let's get back now to LTKS. Put N/UN and this stands for the need to understand the nature of. Put a dash under N for need and following the dash put an H for Herrod. Under that put GKB/F. Under that is a W with respect to NASA. Under G is another period. After the period is the number 5771. Now I've indicated before the number 7 for the year. I told you that 57 stands for Heinz 57 varieties. Cross that out and indicate that 57 stands for the 7th of May. After the 7 of May there is a slash and what follows then is a copy of the above to [redacted] Staff and company for their study, review and critique. Now when I refer to [redacted] I'm referring to [redacted] of NASA/Goddard. Now I plan to call again with my TP quote."

I asked him for his name but he said he preferred to remain anonymous "since I'm not as brave as Senator Church."

ENCLOSURE

Telephone conversation of December 2, 1975, 9:15 a.m.

The caller identified himself as Mr. Abrom Hisler, 5771. He indicated that he now had the Thomas Paine quote referred to in our two previous conversations:

"It is better to develop the whole argument in all its ramifications than to seek to stifle it."

He then said that he now has an argument by [redacted] b6 b7C
[redacted] "(-with psychiatric misuse/[redacted]"

He went on to say:

"This is what would be a confrontation between two approaches. One would be the PQ approach. This would make use of a formula, F for feelings, H for heart and N for no.

"The other approach -- the XYZ approach -- makes use of the MAC concept.

"There is a need for a representative from the Goddard Space Flight Center to come by to talk to him."

I asked if there is a particular time he would prefer and where the representative should go.

"Yes, this afternoon would be better if it is possible. My address is 313 Congressional Lane, Rockville, Maryland."

I asked if he had a phone where he could be reached.

"My phone number is 881-0114. I don't know if it is warranted but I cannot come out. I'm afraid to leave my home to go to Goddard myself."

When asked why he was afraid, he said, "I prefer not to go into that."

I then asked if there was a particular person or division at Goddard that I should contact. He seemed reluctant to give me any specifics and said that if I gave Goddard the information about the MAC concept, they would know who to send.

ENCLOSURE

He indicated that he had sent other quotations to the office of Senators Mathias and McGovern. He had also called their offices.

He then indicated that [redacted] was the person we should contact at Goddard. b6 b7C

Telephone conversation of December 2, 1975, 9:45 a.m.

He called again, this time asking for [redacted] (the Capital investigator) who had identified himself as an aide to Senator Church on the earlier call.

He said that he felt that we should contact [redacted] of Goddards Space Flight Center rather than [redacted] should "have some information concerning what happened on the 7th of May 1971." "He sould suggest that I give [redacted] the Thomas Paine quote and some additional insite of [redacted]

On December 1, 1975, [redacted] was contacted at her office regarding the second call. [redacted] provided the contents of the coded message and advised no threat was made against Senator Church during this call.

On December 1, 1975, [redacted] b6 b7C of Goddard Space Flight Center, Code 100, Goddard Space Flight Center, Greenbelt, Maryland, 20791, was telephonically contacted at his office. [redacted] was advised of the identity of the interviewing Agent and the nature of the inquiry. Thereafter, [redacted] provided the following information:

[redacted] stated the contents of the telephone message received by [redacted] on December 1, 1975, at approximately 9:45 a.m., had no particular significance to him. However, [redacted] b6 b7C identified the initials GSFC in the coded message as being Goddard Space Flight Center and stated that the Thomas Paine referred to in the message could possibly be that of the former Director of Goddard Space Flight Center, Thomas Paine. [redacted] stated that to his knowledge Paine is currently employed by the General Electric Company in Valley Forge, Pennsylvania.

On December 1, 1975, [redacted] for Senator Church, was contacted at his office and provided the name of the Cheasapeake and Potomac Telephone Company representative he would need to contact if he desired to initiate a trace. In addition, [redacted] b6 b7C was advised that the WFO, FBI, could at his request install a recording device on his office telephone in an effort to identify the unknown caller. [redacted] stated he did not know what the Senator wished to do at this time, but would contact the FBI if he wished to have a recording device installed in the future.

On December 2, 1975, three additional calls were received by [redacted] from the above described caller. During the first call, received at approximately 9:15 a.m., b6 b7C the caller identified himself as Abrom Hisler, 313 Congressional Lane, Rockville, Maryland, telephone number 881-0114.

On December, 2, 1975, [redacted] was interviewed at her office and provided the following information:

ABROM HISLER

[redacted] stated during one of the telephone calls, [redacted] United States Capitol Police Investigator, Intelligence Division, had spoken with the caller. [redacted] stated that [redacted] asked the caller what he had meant by his previous statement concerning a possible assassination of Senator Church. Hisler replied that he did not say that he would assassinate or knew anyone who would assassinate Senator Church. Hisler stated his comment was he had a feeling that Senator Church would be assassinated. b6 b7C

On December 2, 1975, [redacted] was interviewed at his office. [redacted] stated in view of the fact there had been no actual overt threat against Senator Church, he was of the opinion that Hisler representated no threat to the Senator. [redacted] stated that he was of the opinion that Senator Church would not want any legal action taken against Hisler as a result of the telephone calls on November 28, 1975, December 1, 1975, and December 2, 1975. b6 b7C

On December 2, 1975, [redacted] of Goddard Space Flight Center, was contacted at his office. [redacted] was questioned regarding the identity of an individual by the name of Abrom Hisler. [redacted] advised that Hisler was known to him and had over the past several years written many letters to the Goddard Space Flight Center. [redacted] advised that Goddard Space Flight Center had a correspondence file regarding Hisler and described Hisler as being strictly in the "crank" category. [redacted] advised he would have the Goddard Space Flight Center file regarding Hisler reviewed and recontact the Washington Field Office. b6 b7C

On December 2, 1975, [redacted] of Administration and Management, Room 140, Building 8, Goddard Space Flight Center, Greenbelt, Maryland, telephonically contacted the Washington Field Office, FBI, and provided the following information regarding Hisler. b6 b7C

[redacted] advised that Hisler is a former employee of the Goddard Space Flight Center and the official file on Hisler had either been destroyed or transferred to St. Louis. [redacted] stated Hisler had a long history of problems while at the Goddard Space Flight Center, including a reduction in grade. [redacted] further stated, to his knowledge Hisler had no known history of violence. b6 b7C

ABROM HISLER

On December 2, 1975, [redacted] United States Capitol Police, Intelligence Division, was contacted at his office to determine the results of the telephone conversation officer [redacted] had with Hisler. Thereafter, [redacted] provided the following information: b6 b7C

[redacted] stated that Officer [redacted] had in fact spoken with Hisler and asked him to come to Senator Church's Office for a conference. Hisler declined to come to the office. [redacted] stated that at no time during the conversation [redacted] had with Hisler was a threat made against Senator Church. b6 b7C

On December 2, 1975, the facts of this case were presented to Assistant United States Attorney (AUSA) Neil A. Kaplan. Kaplan declined prosecution in view of the fact that Hisler had not personally threatened Senator Church, had denied making such a threat, and employees of Senator Church's Office were of the opinion that Senator Church was in no danger. As a result of the above stated facts, AUSA Kaplan stated the case lacked prosecutive merit.

On December 3, 1975, [redacted] United States Capitol Police Intelligence Division, telephonically contacted the Washington Field Office, FBI, and advised that Hisler voluntarily appeared at the Office of Senator Frank Church on December 3, 1975, and was interviewed there. b6 b7C

[redacted] stated he and United States Capitol Police Investigator, [redacted] interviewed Hisler for approximately one hour. According to [redacted] during the course of the interview Hisler made no comment that inferred a threat to Senator Church. FBI Checks Threat On Church, Pike

Associated Press

A right-wing group has threatened to assassinate several prominent politicians, including the chairmen of congressional committees investigating the CIA and an announced presidential candidate, an FBI spokesman says.

He said yesterday the FBI was investigating the threat but that there had been no arrests yet in the case.

The spokesman said the group, which calls itself Veterans Against Communist Sympathizers, threatened to kill Intelligence Committee Chairmen Sen. Frank Church, D-Idaho, and Rep. Otis Pike, D-N.Y.

In addition, the group has threatened Fred Harris, a candidate for the Democratic presidential nomination, and Rep. Ron Dellums, D-Calif. a member of the House Intelligence Committee, the FBI spokesman said.

He added that the threat also was aimed at Tim Butz, head of a Washington-based organization which has been publicly blamed for blowing the cover of CIA agent Richard Welch, who was slain last week in Greece.

The threat came in a note delivered to a Houston television station by "an unidentified individual" on Dec. 26, according to the spokesman, Tom Coll.
